A legal technicality in the county zoning ordinance which has seldom been utilized meant another continuance on the Carmel Valley Property Owners' Association appeal of the use permit granted Dr. Ben Leonard for Villa Vida, a weight control and health resort.

Roy Kaminske, who owns the property on Carmel Valley Road near the base of Los Laurelas Grade, said he found the appeal insufficient as it was filed, and county counsel William Stoffers agreed.

The ordinance says "An appeal shall set forth specifically the points at issue, the reasons for the appeal, and wherein the appellant believes there was an error or abuse of discretion by the appropriate authority."

The CVPOA appeal, however, as filed simply stated they wished to appeal the planning commission action and asked for a public hearing.

The board of supervisors first split two and two on Warren Church's motion to continue the hearing until the CVPOA secured counsel on the legalities involved, and then split two and two on Roger Poyner's motion to hear the matter Tuesday.

Al Esiner, president of the CVPOA, addressed the board, "We would prefer to have the matter heard today. After the board of directors of the CVPOA took action to appeal this use permit, we delegated one of our members to find out the requirements of the appeal from the county clerk."

"We felt we met those requirements. The secretary of our group later checked to make sure we had complied and was given no indication that our appeal was not properly filed," he continued.

"Also, we are already on record with many of our objections, and it was understood that those objections still stood," he concluded.

Poyner wanted the appeal heard Tuesday. "My position is based on the actions of the appellant up to this point. They have moved ahead with every indication their appeal was properly filed," he said.

He continued, "On the one hand we have the stricture of the law and on the other hand the spirit of the law, which was indulged in by the developer, who went ahead as if the appeal were properly filed."

Poyner pointed out either or both parties could bring the matter to court if they believed they had been unfairly treated.

The matter was continued to 2 p.m. on July 8, when the issue of the validity of the appeal will be decided.

Williamson Act deficient

Hailed as a virtual panacea at the start, California's Williamson Act for the conservation of agricultural and open-space lands is seriously deficient and needs substantial strengthening immediately.

This is the principal finding of a review of the legislation and its history since enactment in 1965, published in the Summer issue of the environmental quarterly Cry California.

The author, John B. Dean, an undergraduate at the University of California, Berkeley, says many of the act's failings "may be traced to a complete lack of state guidance and coordination, and the resulting haphazard implementation of the program at the local level."

Dean continues: "Several counties, including Los Angeles, have never applied the act, while others have made only token efforts to enroll endangered land."

(The legislation was the outgrowth of wodespread public concern at the loss of extensive areas of the state's highly productive farmland. It was designed to offset inequities in California's property-tax system by giving preferential consideration to owners who agree to keep their land in agricultural or a compatible nonurban use for at least ten years. In practice, much land of secondary quality and under no threat of development has been put under contract.)

Even with modifications, Dean believes the act will fall far short of being a comprehensive land-planning and regulation tool.

"A major flaw is that it is at best only a temporary solution to the agricultural-open-space problem. Since the landowner may cancel the contract with the approval of the local legislative body, or may simply allow it to expire, there is nothing to prevent the speculator from entering into a contract while fully intending to develop the land at a future date.

"With rising land values and the relative ease with which the contract can be circumvented, the act can at best only slow down or postpone urbanization, allowing the contract lands to gradually become part of the problem once again."

If the act is to be effective, in Dean's opinion, "financial incentives to the owners of prime farmland must be increased. Perhaps this could be done by retaining the current income-capitalization method of tax assessment, but providing a rebate or an outright reduction from this total, based on the number of acres of prime land under cultivation."

Dean also proposes the legislature mandate that all counties institute a program modeled on Santa Clara County's Urban Development and Open Space Plan. He says:

"Completed in 1973 after two years of study, this plan establishes 'urban service areas' around the perimeter of each of the county's incorporated cities. These areas are large enough to accommodate the projected growth of the city over the next five years, and to confine essentially all urban development within their boundaries."

CARMEL HIGH SCHOOL'S newspaper The Sandpiper, has been awarded a first class rating by the National Scholastic Press Association. This is the second time during the past year that The Sandpiper has received this rating. A mark of distinction was also given the student newspaper for editorial leadership. Printed on campus by the school graphic arts department, the paper is paid for entirely by advertising revenue and written and edited by students in the journalism class. Student editors for the newspaper include editor-in-chief, Candy Kaller; news editor, Steve Lyon; advertising manager Julie Zoellin; and sports editor, Doug Thompson. Sanitary district OKs $886,920 in expenditures

The Carmel Sanitary District has approved budget calling for $886,920 in expenditures during the 1975-1976 fiscal year. Members of the board agreed that the tax rate for district property owners will probably remain unchanged next year at 30 cents per $100 of assessed property value.

Projected expenditures are added to a $1,700,000 reserve currently in district accounts for expansion and improvements to bring the total budget to $2,595,920 for the upcoming year. That figure stands below a $2,808,120 budget for the 1974-1975 fiscal year.

Action on the budget was taken with little debate at a meeting of the board last Monday night in Carmel City Hall chambers. It followed expressions of apprehension earlier in the year, when sludge handling problems at the district plant had resulted in unanticipated expenditures, that a significant budget and tax hike might be necessary.

The largest single increase in expenditures in the approved budget falls in the area of operating expenditures. A total of $456,500 is budgeted for salaries, employe benefits, plant operation and maintenance, up from a figure of $387,700 in the $974-1975 budget.

Capital asset projects in the district are a much smaller item in this year's budget than in the last fiscal year. A total of $192,000 is budgeted for projects which include equipment acquisition and design of new facilities. Last year's budget included $400,000, received principally in grant funds, for a new digester, and a total of $508,700 was budgeted for capital asset projects.

Total revenues to be raised through taxes are projected at $246,000 up from $228,000 last year.

In other business confronting the district this week, board president Herman Schull reported on a "workshop session" of the state water resources control board in Sacramento concerning the proposed designation of Carmel Bay as an Area of Special Biological Significance.

No action was taken at the June 4 workshop. A final decision on the designation was postponed until June 19.

Indicating that at least one of the five-member state board had expressed support for the restrictive designation, which would result in either complete or partial elimination of effluent disposal from the district's ocean outfall, Schull related testimony in Sacramento which had "bothered" him.

"They referred to the outfall as temporary, while we have a permanent easement across the beach" for the outfall line, he said.

Considerable discussion was given to a letter from the department of parks and recreation pointing to a "dramatic decline in fish population," a lack of chloroform count data, and limited operation of diffusers on the outfall."

After listening to testimony from attorney Tom Hudson of Point Lobos, a longtime opponent of the outfall operation who said "my family has been telling you the outfall has had a (detrimental effect) for five years," the board appropriated $350 for a written analysis of possible detrimental effects from Oceanographic Services, a firm which formerly held a contract for monitoring the water quality of the bay.

Sam Farr appointed to supervisorial post

Sam Farr of Carmel, a 33-year-old Democrat and legislative consultant, has been appointed by Governor Edmund G. Brown Jr. to fill the fifth supervisorial district seat vacated by Republican Robert Bolman in March.

Farr, the son of former state senator Fred Farr of Carmel, has been employed by the California Assembly as a consultant on constitutional amendments since May 1, 1971. His duties consisted of analyzing all constitutional amendments presented in either the Assembly or Senate..

Farr is a former Peace Corps volunteer stationed in Columbia. He received a bachelor of arts degree from Willamette University in Oregon and has studied at the Santa Clara School of Law and the Monterey Institute of Foreign Studies. He was chairman of Julian Camacho's congressional campaign last year.

Who plans Carmel Valley?

Zoning administrator describes function

The most important thing for the public to remember at any planning or zoning hearing is "Stick to the issue," according to Robert Slimmon, zoning administrator for Monterey County.

Slimmon should know what he's talking about, for he individually hears certain zoning matters and represents the planning staff before the commission on others.

Slimmon suggests, "Discuss the matter with the planning and zoning staffs and review the file on every matter you are interested in." He says all files on planning and zoning matters are open to the public at all times.

"There is no reason for there to be any big surprises when a matter gets to the planning commission, because both the applicant and any who oppose a change or certain use have an equal opportunity to study the complete file," he says.

If you are an applicant, Slimmon says, "Make sure you present complete information. Otherwise, you won't be hurting anyone except yourself."

The position of zoning administrator has not always been used in Monterey County, but Slimmon believes most people who are involved in the system, either as applicants or in a county department, are satisfied with the procedure, if not always with the results.

"Under state law," he explains, "A planning commission can act on all zoning applications, or a board of zoning adjustment can be set up. Monterey County operated with a board of zoning adjustment about six years."

"Comprised of three planning commissioners, the board heard all variances and some use permit applications. But in 1966, the board members felt too much of their time was being taken up by their planning responsibilities and they asked the board of supervisors to investigate an alternative," he says.

At that time, only Marin and Santa Clara counties had zoning administrators, and some of their procedures were different than those now used by Monterey County. After several investigatory field trips, Monterey County adopted the zoning administrator hearing officer procedure.

Now Slimmon hears all applications for variances and several use permit applications monthly. The state law lists specifically which applications are heard by the administrator and which are heard by the planning commission.

"Generally, a use permit application where the intended use would change the character of an area goes to the planning commission," Slimmon says. He estimates he hears about two-thirds of the use permits issued in Monterey County.

Little opposition has been registered to the changeover, he believes, "I haven't heard much adverse comment about the applications being heard by one professional instead of three laypeople."

For the purpose of discussion, Slimmon explains that a variance is generally required for any deviation from the strict application of zoning ordinances. "The law provides variances can't be granted for a use not specifically allowed within the zoning ordinance," he explains, citing an example of requesting a variance in an R-1 district to establish a retail grocery store.

Use permits are required in Monterey County, Slimmon explains, because the zoning ordinances are "permissive." He continues, "That simply means that permitted uses are listed in each section of the ordinance. If it is not listed, it is not allowed. Some counties have ordinances written exactly the opposite. They list only the uses which aren't permitted--everything else is."

Use permits are an effective planning tool, Slimmon says, for two reasons: They make people aware of proposed changes around them by requiring public hearings; they keep the laws from becoming too cumbersome.

"If the ordinances had to list every possibly acceptable use and all conditions that would make such uses acceptable, there would practically be no end to the volumes of laws required," he says. Use permit hearings allow staff to give approval to individual projects and individually set conditions that make the project acceptable, such as road dedications, time limits, wastewater disposal, design control and the like.

Slimmon agrees with Planning Director Ed DeMars, who last week said the first concern of the planning department before issuing permits was consistency with the specific area plan. "If an application for a particular use is initially inconsistent with the area plan, there is no point in going any further, because state law requires that we require consistency," he says.

Slimmon briefly traces the path of an application for a use permit through his office. If it appears the application is consistent with the specific area plan, the planning department accepts the application with the necessary filing fees.

The application is sent to the planning commission for environmental consideration. The planning commission may file a negative declaration or recommend to the board of supervisors that an environmental impact report be prepared. "the board almost always follows the recommendation of the planning commission," Slimmon says, "Unless some new evidence is brought to its attention that was unavailable when the commission first heard the matter."

After either a negative declaration is filed or an EIR is certified as complete, the zoning administrator schedules a public hearing on the matter before the commission.

Slimmon explains that any rezoning matter requires special notification of certain property owners. "We must notify everyone within the zoning area and within 300 feet of the perimeter of the zoning area about the public hearing," he says.

The public hearing before the commission will lead to a recommendation to the board of supervisors, he says. If the commission recommends denial, Slimmon explains, "The application dies there, unless the applicant choses to appeal."

If approval is recommended, it is forwarded to the board, where it is again set for public hearing, and where it also requires renotification of the adjacent property owners.

On matters heard before the zoning administrator alone, Slimmon explains, few EIR's are required, and the process is considerably faster. "Generally, I am able to file a negative declaration, with the advice of the environmental division, set a public hearing date, place notification in a local paper, post the area and notify adjacent property owners within a short period of time," he says.

Although he allows all public comment that is desired and often finds himself with a full board room, Slimmon often disposes of as many as 36 applications in two hours, while it may take the planning commission a day and a half to process that many.

The speed with which applications can be granted is one advantage to the zoning administrator approach, Slimmon believes. As a professional and a member of the planning staff, he has a greater opportunity for familiarity with individual applications than would a member of the planning commission, who might be hearing an application "cold," Slimmon says.

Decisions made by the zoning administrator are final, Slimmon points out, unless one of the parties (the applicant or a citizen in opposition to the application) appeals his decision within 10 days to the board of supervisors.

New rules adopted for CV airstrip

Pilots taking off from the Carmel Valley airstrip must climb to at least 1,000 feet before turning right, according to FAA regulations drafted Thursday in a meeting at the local landing strip.

Benjamin Harris of the FAA and Owen Wedell of the aeronautics division of the Department of Transportation, said the more stringent flight rules for the strip would be published in the Airman's Information Manual, which pilots are required to consult before flying.

The two met Thursday with airport owner Peter DelFino at the request of area residents, including Col. Irwin T. Johnson, Rufus A. Tracy, Joseph Siegfried and Terry Jones, all residents of the Country Club Drive area.

The airguide listing for Carmel Valley which lists the current MSL as 800 feet will be changed and expanded, Wedell suggested, to read: Straight Out Departure RW 29--no right turns below 1,000 feet. Traffic pattern altitude 1,500 feet.

Touch and go landings will continue to be prohibited as well as landings by unlicensed pilots. Wedell will also draw up an FAA pattern chart for local distribution, and pilots will be required to follow that pattern thereafter, officials said.

The group of Country Club Drive residents presented their complaints about "wild and noisy" planes flying over their homes in recent years to the Monterey County Airport Land Use Commission in mid-May.

Col. Johnson, a retired engineer with experience in airport design, said many planes pass over his home at less than 100 feet, even though the house is 3,700 feet from the end of the runway and 35 degrees of the axis of the runway.

He said in 1972, three planes attempting a formation takeoff barely missed colliding with his house, two of them knocking foliage from an adjacent oak tree.

Tracy earlier placed a sign at the airstrip advising fliers of proper flight procedures, and letters have been sent to Rep. Burt Talcott, supervisor Willard Branson and the San Jose office of the FAA.

Wedell, who is in charge of the establishment and physical layout of airports in Northern California arranged the meeting with the FAA and DelFino. Flying in from Sacramento, Wedell and Harris could not land at Monterey Airport Thursday because it was fogged in.

Wedell said the growth of residential development near existing airstrips can be seen in many communities, citing postwar growth in Blythe, Ca., where residential development rings half a dozen military airstrips in the desert.

DelFino pointed out there has never been an accident at the Carmel Valley airstrip, which was granted its present permit in 1949, but which has grandfather rights

Kiwanis barbeque

A nice tradition, entertaining presidents and secretaries of the peninsula Kiwanis Clubs, was followed by Shirley and Otto Huebner who hosted 45 dignitaries and wives at a Sunday swim and barbecue party at their home on Toyon Drive.

"Sunshine," promised in a postscript on the invitations, shone brightly on the red table cloths laden with steaks and all the trimmings, served in the Huebner gardens.

Bart Bartoli provided the musical entertainment on his accordian and gag gifts were awarded guest, including oversized pencils to the secretaries, "So they will get their reports in on time!"

Swim banquet

Celebration of a season described by Coach Jim Agan as "laced with desire, determination, and hard work culminated by the eighth straight Mission Trail Athletic League championship" highlighted the Carmel High School awards banquet. The champion Padres totaled 111 points for first place, Hollister, 85 points for second, and Pacific Grove, 75 for third.

Depth in seasoned underclassmen willing to compete wherever needed in Varsity or Junior Varsity was a heavy factor in the success of the season. The Padres are losing two senior swimmers and have five juniors returning next year.

Awards were presented by Coach Agan and Coach Bob Walthour to Frosh-Soph swimmers, Jeff Mink, CV, named Team Captain, and Steve Allard, CV, voted most valuable. The Varsity awards were accepted by Ken Conklin, CV, Team captain, and Lance Kolding, CV, Most Valuable.

Allen Brenner of the ABC House was a dinner guest and commended the 58 swimmers from both the boys and the girls swim teams who swam 200 laps in the Swimathon "A Better Swim for A Better Chance" with funds donated to the ABC students. He presented a certificate for two dinners at the La Playa Hotel to Jeff Mink who obtained over $200 as his contribution to the project.

Also awarded were MTAL first place certificates, Varsity Block letters and gifts of appreciation to the coaches and score keepers, Barbie Leonard and Margaret Kenny.

Mrs. Richard Jung was in charge of the potluck dinner attended by family and friends.

Volunteer reception

A "Recognition Reception" honoring Tularcitos volunteers and staff was held last Wednesday at the Buckeye Restaurant. Host Phil Smith, was assisted by Mrs. Linda Gorham and Mrs. Rita Brackenrich.

Among the 90 guests were Pam Smith, Betty Bell, and Fran Gaver of the School Board and Dan Yurkovich, asst. Suptr. of schools.

Retiring curriculum co-ordinator for the CUSD, Orville Rogers, who was celebrating his 65th birthday, was surprised by Gail Buche with a birthday cake and a card signed by his many Tularcitos friends.

The volunteers were cited for their contribution of over 3500 hours as classroom aides and swimming instructors, and countless additional hours involved in enrichment programs, including folk dancing, cooking, creative drama, first aid, tennis, sewing, gardening, music and special art activities.

Volunteers are not just drawn from the students' parents, but are representative of the wealth of community talent.

Next year with the possibility of Tularcitos becoming an ECE (Early Childhood Education) school with funding from the state, more volunteers than ever will be needed. Anyone wishing to assist with time and talent is invited to call the new volunteer co-ordinator, Theresa Brodsley, 659-2843 or the school office, 659-2276.

St. Dunstan's Benefit

Ann Melching and Shirley Biggins were co-hostesses of the May St. Dunstan's benefit bridge and canasta party given by Kathryn Walker at her home on Flight Road.

Flowers from the paper party fare to fresh arrangements in hand painted glasses enhanced the "Flowers of May" theme for the 48 guests in attendance:

Marian Shaur was the first place winner in bridge, Olene Dick placed second. Canasta high was won by Jean De Haas with Vera Stokes winning second.

Reservations for the June 26th party may be made by phoning Kathryn Walker, 659-2280.

Ladies Night

The potluck dinner was followed by games of bingo called by personable Bob Rautenberg.

Among the invited guests were former Seaside mayor, Lou Haddad, and his wife, welcomed as new Valley residents.

Presidents honored

Tribute was paid to the past presidents of the Carmel Valley Women's Club at the installation luncheon held last week at the Monterey Elk's Club.

Accepting orchids given by Doris Bundgard and Florence Dickinson were Gertrude Stone, the earliest living past president who served from 1951 to 1952; and Getha Uzell, Beulah Corona, Ceal Verga, Vivi Erion, Martha Huff, Dena Fields, Margaret Moore, Alice Johnson, Elizabeth Hoisington, Doreen McKenzie, and Ann Marshall.

Nellie Mirani, Orrell O'Hartnett, and Ruth Francis who co-chaired the affair had decorated the tables with ivy, fern, pale pink camellias, yellow marguerites, and pastel orchids. An arrangement of late spring flowers in pastel shades flanked by silver candlelabra centered the officers' table.

A silver tray, a token of appreciation to Ann Marshall who had served as president for the past two years, was presented by Alice Johnson, who installed the new officers.

Ramona Ryan accepted the gavel as president; Connie Riordan, vice president and ways and means chairman; Martha Huff, treasurer; Regina Nye, financial secretary; Nellie Mirani, corresponding secretary; Elizabeth Hoisington, recording secretary.

Directors will be Ruth Francis, luncheon and teas, Doris Bundgard, program, Orrell O'Hartnett, sunshine and hospitality, Dorothy Gonzenbach, membership, Frances Anthony, telephone, Florence Dickinson, publicity, Vera Stokes, memory book, and Ann Marshall, parlimentarian.

Of great interest to Valleyites was the decision by the group to purchase 50 new chairs for the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center. These are in addition to the 25 purchased last fall for the Center.

Cisneros entertain

Sandi and Larry Cisneros thanked fellow members of the outgoing Tularcitos Parents Club board by hosting a dinner party in their honor last Friday evening at their Valle Vista home.

Entertainment for the informal "Plateau Dinner" was provided by the host's nephew, Phil Cisneros, and Rachel Bennett who sang and played the guitar and the mandolin.

Tularcitos principal, Phil Smith, joined the festivities attended by Georgene and Dave Abbott, Linda and Bill Gorham, Amelia and Dick Franke, Kathy and Noel Binford, Gail and Dale Buche, Marilyn and Dave Stainbrook, and Diane and Dennis Norrby.

Cecka graduation

A special Father's Day gift is in store for Mr. and Mrs. Jim Cecka of Flight Road whose son, Mike, will receive his Ph.D. on Sunday from the University of California at Los Angeles.

A major in micro-biology, Mike specialized in imunology and plans to continue with research in his field.

Arriving from the east to accompany the Valley-ites to the graduation ceremonies were Jim's sister, Alice Cecka, his sister-in-law, Mrs. M.C. Cecka of Minneapolis, and his brother, Ed Cecka of Buffalo, New York.

The Ceckas just returned from two weeks in the Islands. Four very exciting days of their stay was spent at the volcano on the Orchid Island where they had views of the steam vents from their room. They enjoyed their stay in Honolulu while guests at the Bellows Air Force Base and toured Oahu.

They brought greetings from former Rancho Road residents, Rosemary Clifford (who is golfing with a 20 handicap) and from her husband, George, who has bought a boat and fishes while ROSEMARY (a former Outlook editor) golfs.

Mike and Jim were given a states welcome home with a dinner party given by Mrs. Philip Walker. Dinner guests included Cmdr. (USN ret) and Mrs. Clifford Tomlinson, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Klingensmith, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Dick and Mrs. William Walker. Beth Walker, a former resident of Lilac Lane was on a flying trip to the Valley from her home in Scottsdale, Ariz.

Get well messages

A speedy recovery to Valley-ites who have been recently hospitalized: Vic Harber of Lilac Lane, Mrs. Kaye Appleton of Garzas Road, Mrs. Clifford Bolgard of La Rancheria, Mr. and Mrs. Terry Wilson, Paso Honda, Mrs. Dorothy Griffiths of El Cammito, Mrs. John Power of Country Club Drive, and Master Walter Reuter of Upper Circle.

Boronda election

"Dr. and Mrs. Jim Hicks are the new community leaders for the Boronda 4-H Club assisted by co-ordinators, Mrs. Ray Wolfe, Mrs. Andy Buckner, and Mrs. Chip Collins," according to club scribe, Kathy Collins, who sent us a report of the general meeting held at the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center.

Hacienda Carmel
The Spanish word "hacienda" means a landed estate or a community built around such a ranch or estate; a plantation-like community.

Hacienda Place
Short cul-de-sac off Rio Vista Drive.
Name given by the developer, possibly arising out of the prior existence of a substantial house nearby, the word "hacienda" in Spanish meaning a ranch or landed estate, which would have its central house.

El Hemorroo
Road in Robles del Rio.

Hennicksons Ridge
Ridge running from southeast to northwest (highest point 2,853 feet) and forming the divide between the upper Carmel River to the SW and Cachagua Creek to the NE.
The name is a corruption of Henningsen. Nicholi Hennigsen, who came originally from Denmark, settled in the area around 1855. A daughter, Mrs. Laura Sunkley, lives in Jamesburg.

Hastings Natural hhistory Reservation
A tract of about 1,950 acres owned by the University of California and operated by its Museum of Vertebrate Zoology. It is located on Finch Creek and the upper Carmel Valley Road near the eastern edge of the Carmel River watershed and is kept as nearly as possible in its original natural condition to facilitate zoological and botanical studies.
The name was originally "Frances Simes Hastings Natural History Reservation," for the wife of Russell Platt Hastings, a civil engineer who retired and bought the property in 1929 and ran cattle on it for several years. Eventually, he turned it over on loan to the University, and the reservation was established in 1937. When Mrs. Hastings died in an accident in 1963, the University received full title by the terms of her will.

Hatton Canyon
The first canyon to the east of State Highway 1 on the north side of the Valley. It divides Carmel Hills from Carmel Knolls subdivision.
Named for William Hatton, a native of Ireland who left home at the age of 13 to go to sea and later settled in Charleston, South Carolina, where he married Kate Harney. In 1870 they moved to California, and Hatton worked on the St. John dairy farm near Salinas. He eventually bought that farm and also some land south of the Carmel River. In 1888 Hatton became manager of the Canada de la Segunda Rancho, then belonging to the widow of Faxon Dean Atherton, and also of the large acreage in the upper Carmel Valley owned by the Pacific Improvement Company, owners and operators of the Del Monte Hotel.
In 1892 Mr. and Mrs. Hatton purchased the Canada de la Segunda ranch and built a large house on land which is now part of Carmel Knolls. William Hatton died in 1894, but his widow and sons continued to farm the property.
The Hatton name is also perpetuated in Hatton Fields, a residential area just west of Highway 1.

Calle de los Helechos
Road in Robles del Rio.

Gosh, I'd forgotten how handsome he was. The Sunday Super Movie was "Son of Paleface" and there on TV was my old flame, my heart-throb. Cavorting around with Bob Hope, Jane Russell, and his old sidekick, Roy Rogers, was my childhood sweetheart, Trigger!

Such a face! Such a figger! Better than gold, that was Trigger. That magnificent silvery tail floated out behind him, his hide shining like a newly minted coin. Trigger made every kid my age long for a palomino.

Plenty of adults then and since went after their heart's desire. Palominos were more in demand than they had ever been since the Gold Rush diverted the California's attention from the caballo de oro. During Trigger's hay-days, palomino breeding increased dramatically, In 1941, a palomino registry was chartered. Today there are more than 20,000 of the golden horses.

The Palomino Horse Breeders' Association was established to "provide for the registration, purity of blood and improvement of breeding of palomino horses, and to keep, maintain and publish the history, record and pedigree thereof."

This they have proceeded to do very well. Not just any golden horse can be registered.

The palomino must be the color of a newly minted US gold coin--not that many of those are in circulation. The mane and tail are white, but the skin is dark, except under white markings which are allowed only on the face or lower legs. The palomino must stand at least 14 hands and weigh at least 900 pounds. Horses of draft or pony characteristics are OUT.

Also out is the palomino of unknown breeding. At least one parent must be registered as a palomino--or as a thoroughbred, quarter horse, saddlebred, Arabian, Morgan, or Tennessee walker. This is why you meet so many palominos who are double registered both as a palomino and as a purebred quarter horse or whatever.

Palomino quarter horses dominate the color breed. Three-quarters are at least half quarter horse. More than half are three-quarters quarter horse. Are you half confused? No matter how you cut it, the likes of Cutter Bill, Hollywood Gold, Plaudit and Question Mark are well liked.

Almost all the other palominos are saddlebreds, this reflecting a double interest in a showy color and a showy breed. There are a few palomino Morgans. A purebred palomino Arabian or Thoroughbred would be a nine day wonder. Palominos bred to thoroughbreds or Arabians almost always produce greys or creams.

The palomino is a genetic ingenue. He is really just an inhibited bay or buckskin. The buckskin and the palomino have an inhibited expression of the red factor which in normal in horses' coats. The melanin that blackens the mane and tail of a bay or buckskin is totally inhibited in a palomino. The result is a gold colored horse with almost white points.

The best way to achieve a palomino colt is not by breeding a palomino mare to a palomino stallion. That cross results in bays, chestnuts and albinos, and once in a while, another palomino. The best way is to breed a palomino to an albino, totally inhibited, which results in a 50 per cent chance for a palomino and a 50 per cent chance for an albino.

The colt whose mother or father was an albino cannot, however, be registered with PHBA, no matter how pretty he is. Horses with piebald sires or dams are also barred from registration.

The PHBA horses are almost all the result of sorrel to palomino breeding. Money flowing the direction it does, most palominos result from a chestnut mare visiting a palomino stallion. Certain bloodlines seem to almost guarantee a palomino foal, but there is still an element of risk. The foal might be another color than palomino.

Palomino exhibitors not only compete as purebreds in quarterhorse classes and so forth, but also in all palomino classes and all palomino horseshows. They compete in Western pleasure, English pleasure, trail, stock and parade classes.

The trail classes, in addition to opening a gate and other familiar trail obstacles, often include loading into a horse trailer right there in the show area. Trailering is certainly a desireable trait in any riding horse. We wish more shows would adopt this useful test as part of trail class obstacles.

The parade classes emphasize early California inspired costumes with heavy Santa Barbara type bits and face chains for decoration. The entire saddle, bridle and often a draped skirt behind the saddle is heavily decorated with nickel chrome plates. This is termed a silver outfit. The riders prefer Grand Ol' Opry type cowboy clothes.

In larger parades there are prizes for the rider who makes the best "silver" appearance. The biggest display of silver parade outfits probably appears in Pasadena on New Year's Day each year. William Jennings Bryan would be speechless.

A TEACHING POST in England this fall beckons George A. Gray III, winner of an Outstanding Student Teacher award from the University of San Francisco School of Education. The 22-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Gray Jr. of Meadow Place, Carmel Valley, was honored for his classroom performance this spring at Marina Junior High School in San Francisco. A 1970 graduate of the former Junipero High School in Monterey, Gray has completed a postgraduate year of studies at USF for his state teaching credential. His first job will take him to Romford in Essex. There he will teach English and religion at St. Edward's Comprehensive School, founded by the Church of England in 1710.

Carmel Plaza

B

Most any time of day you'll find fine craft people at work in a number of shops around the charming garden courtyard at The Plaza. In addition to those illustrated, see Gem Craft Gallery, Golden Opportunity, Burlwoods Gallery and Carmel Creations for a great selection of hand crafted work.

A. CREATIVE DECOR's Bob Hillis is happy to chat with visitors to his window location. He sculpts unique furniture and magnificent wall pieces in brass, copper and steel.

B. OCEAN IMPRESSIONS' two sand painters, Jan and Sharon Peterson, portray the color and textures they find along the beaches in their novel, beautiful and intricate sand paintings.

C. LUIS ANTONIO frequently sculpts in front of his shop. Working in unusual woods he creates such fine sculptures as "Confucius and the wolf" carved in Nutmeg wood. Price $1000.

D. DONALD SAXBY studies one of his meditative sculptures in his Gallery on the Terrace Level. Open Tuesday thru Sunday, he also shows fabulous tie-dyes, pottery and pendulum glass.

E. RUG CRAFTERS, Arthur and Cynthia Horning have just opened at The Plaza. They'll teach you to make a handbag or area rugs (starter set, 26.95) or they'll custom make a rug to match your decor.

F. ELEGANT NEEDLEPOINT's Ele Portnoy is a talented instructor and unusually creative artist. Buy her original small needlepoint canvas (including yarn) for $5 or choose her Picasso for $85.

G. PENELOPE imports washable lamb suede from England, then custom makes garments in a day for a fitting. The garment is carefully sewn so it will fit beautifully when you receive it.
